

See This Elegant Ladies' Wardrobe Trunk?

It IS elegant—yes! Strong like a battleship, which, by the way, it HAS to be to withstand the rough handling by express and railroad men.

The BERRY Ladies' Wardrobe Trunk is the only trunk in which the most elaborate and dainty gowns can be transported and always found as good as when fresh from the makers. It is roomy, light in weight, dust and damp proof. Holds two ladies' hats. Its convenient arrangement of different compartments makes it a decided and distinct departure from all other Combination Wardrobe Trunks.

Built with a bulge on two sides and one end, insuring the right side up at all times. In other words: PERFECTION THROUGHOUT.

Different sizes! Different prices!

MILLIONS WILL USE RED CROSS SEALS

Seals and stamps for advertising national and local gatherings are also used to a considerable extent.

Used in Denmark. Stamps were first used for anti-tuberculosis work in Norway and Sweden in 1901. At Copenhagen, in the fall of 1904, a committee of fifteen met to discuss a plan whereby an idea for a Christmas stamp advanced by Mr. Holboel, a post-office official, might be put into practice.

On the recommendation of this committee it was decided to print 2,000,000 stamps and to sell them at 2 cents each (about one-half a cent), the proceeds to go toward the erection of a Children's Seaside Tuberculosis Hospital, similar to Sea Breeze Hospital, at Coney Island. The commission provided for a profit of about 5 cents on each sheet of fifty stamps for the local post-offices, but so enthusiastic did the officials become over their work that they sold and handled all the stamps and refused to accept any reward. At the end of the season, which lasted only from December 8 to January 5, it was found that 4,113,000 stamps had been sold, or about two for every man, woman and child in Denmark. The comfortable sum of 65,000 kroner (about $20,000) was realized for the hospital. The receipts last year from these stamps in Denmark were five times as large.

The Danish stamp was really the inspiration for the Red Cross stamp in America. In July, 1907, Jacob Rills published the story of the Danish stamp and called upon such people in this country to adopt some such device to support the national anti-tuberculosis crusade. Because of lack of funds and other pressing obligations, the National Association for the Study and Prevention of Tuberculosis could not accept Mr. Rills' challenge, and no other national body felt charged with the responsibility of undertaking so new a venture.

The seed sown by Jacob Rills might have died had not a little group of women in Delaware, headed by Miss Emily P. Ewell, seen the possibilities of a Christmas stamp. For the purpose of gaining support for a State anti-tuberculosis campaign in Delaware, the scheme was launched, and within three weeks, from December 7 to Christmas, nearly 400,000 stamps were sold in Delaware, Philadelphia and Eastern Pennsylvania and nearly $3,000 was realized for the tuberculosis fight.

On National Basis. The leaders in this sale were closely allied with the Red Cross Society of Delaware, which had taken an active part in the movement. The American Red Cross also gave the Delaware experiment its support, and the directors of that organization decided to try the sale of Christmas tuberculosis stamps on a national basis. After some hesitation about the amount of stamps that would be needed, an order for 1,000,000 stamps of a design by Howard Pyle was given. So successful was the sale, however, that when the central committee at Washington began to count up on Christmas Day, 1908, it was found that 30,000,000 stamps had been printed, 25,000,000 sold to local agents, and nearly 17,000,000 were sold at 1 cent each, yielding a profit of about $135,000, after all expenses had been paid. That this result should have been attained with practically no previous knowledge or experience in handling the sales, and with little or no organization, proved from the outset the tremendous popularity of the idea.

In 1908 the American Red Cross printed the stamps and sold them direct to local agents.

rectly to local agents, who were themselves responsible for all stamps left on their hands, and who had to do all their own advertising besides. This resulted in a great loss to many committees, some having as many as 500,000 stamps left unsold. Last year, in 1909, an attempt was made to improve upon the conditions of sale in 1908. Instead of selling the stamps outright to local agents, the Red Cross furnished as many stamps as might be needed, and charged, according to their first announcement, 33 1/3 per cent. of the gross proceeds. This percentage was later reduced to 20 per cent. In return for the 20 per cent., the Red Cross, besides furnishing the stamps, supplied also a varied assortment of advertising matter to all local agents. For various reasons, there was an unfortunate multiplication of local stamps for tuberculosis work in various parts of the United States and Canada last year. No less than seven State and local stamps, besides the American Red Cross stamp, were issued in 1909, but for the most part they netted little profit. In Michigan an Eastern stamp was issued, and in New York City a stamp for the National Association for the Prevention of Mendicancy met with little support.

The results of last year's sales, however, show that nearly $250,000 was realized from the sale of Christmas stamps for the anti-tuberculosis campaign, nearly double the amount in 1908. If to this sum be added the proceeds of local stamps, the sale in 1909 would be more than double that in 1908.

People Battling Against Disease

They Are Joining in Fight to Stop Ravages of Tuberculosis.

New buildings at Catawba Sanatorium, doubling its capacity, were opened Saturday. Richmond Tuberculosis Camp opens to-day, with twenty patients. Red Cross Christmas stamps go on sale all over the State to-day. State Anti-Tuberculosis Conference will be held next Friday and Saturday.

These events, coming within the compass of one week, are of the utmost significance in marking the progress of the campaign against consumption in Virginia.

Inasmuch as the cure of those who have the disease has become a mere incident, the main effort being their segregation and the prevention of infection, the fact that seventy-four victims in this State are within two days placed in sanatoria means not only that most of them will recover and will be returned to society as producing members, but it means that seventy-four beds of infection will be closed.

On one hand, the State, reaching out with paternal arm to protect the health of its citizens, and on the other public-minded citizens of Richmond, who desire to shield from infection their fellowmen, are within forty-eight hours reaching the consummation of months of effort and of planning.

follows: William Hodges Mann Pavilion, Claude A. Swanson Pavilion, W. W. Baker Pavilion, A. M. Bowman Pavilion and Rawley W. Martin Pavilion. The old female leprosy has been christened the Samuel Peachy Latane Pavilion, in honor of the beloved physician who gave his life to his patients.

Other Structures. The other two new buildings are an office building and a combination dining and amusement hall. The latter is so arranged that the patients may eat their meals there, and the floor may be cleared for lectures, for illustrated addresses, for dancing or for any other amusement which the people at the sanatorium may elect to enjoy.

Fifty-four new patients find room in the new buildings, which were opened Saturday. Probably two weeks will elapse before all of these reach the sanatorium, although some of them are already on the ground. Everything is ready for their reception. This makes the total patient population of the institution 110, and it about exhausts the waiting list, which will immediately proceed to fill up again.

This filling-up process goes on all the time, and the next General Assembly will inevitably be asked to make provision for more men and women, so that they may be made into producing members of society, and so that danger from infection to those who surround them may be obviated.

The new buildings, seven in number, form the second unit of the plan for the elimination of consumption in incipient cases. The third unit will speedily become necessary.

Catawba has one of the most complete plants for the disposal of sewage in the country, and one in which the health officials feel no little pride. The water supply is of splendid quality, and its shed is well protected from contamination.

Pine Camp Opens. Coming to the work done in this city, it should be remembered that citizens have opened their purses and have given of their means for the erection of the buildings at what is known as Pine Camp. The city of Richmond donated only the ground, which is a part of the city farm, on the extension of Chamberlayne Avenue.

No formal exercises will attend the opening of Pine Camp this morning.

As many of the twenty patients as can be ready will simply be moved into it, and twenty sources of the spread of tuberculosis in Richmond will at once be eliminated. This is only the beginning.

Miss Florence Black will be the nurse in charge, and Dr. Giles B. Cook is to be the chief physician. Unlike the policy of the State, advanced cases are taken in the Richmond camp. Some of these men and women will not recover, and there is no ambition to preserve a record of no deaths, for this cannot be hoped for. But some of them will get well, and in many others the disease will be arrested and life prolonged. But more than all, the infection will be partly removed from the city, which some of these days is going to be cleaned up of consumption.

Christmas Seals. At 9 o'clock this morning 70,000 people in the United States will begin one of the most unique public movements of the year—the national sale of the Red Cross Christmas seals. Months of careful work in Richmond, in Virginia and elsewhere has perfected the arrangement for the sale, and nothing is lacking to make the plans complete.

One hundred million stamps were manufactured for the sale by the National Association for the Study and Prevention of Tuberculosis. Millions of posters and placards have been printed, and thousands of health workers have given their time to it for months. In every city of consequence in the country, and in nearly every town, from five to a thousand people will begin this morning to sell the stamps, and to urge this great charity upon the people.

Plans for the sale of the seals in Richmond have been worked out with great care by those who have the matter in charge. The Nurses' Settlement will officiate in Richmond and will have more than sixty stations for the sale of the stamps. Their tables will be all over the city this morning.

Seventy-five localities in Virginia have undertaken the work, and in most of the towns there will be committees disposing of the stamps. Nearly all of the money realized stays in the community and in the State, only a small part going to the National Society. Every dollar goes to health work, and every seal is a bullet in the war against consumption.

Conference This Week. The first State Conference on Tuberculosis will open its sessions on Friday night of this week, the meeting lasting until Saturday night. Leading health workers in Virginia will be present, will tell of the campaign being waged and will outline the war of the future. The meetings are to be held at the Virginia Mechanics' Institute.

A prominent feature of this affair will be the tuberculosis exhibits, which will form the most complete collection ever seen in Virginia. It will include the State Hygiene Department exhibit, the Catawba exhibit, the Norfolk city exhibit, the Petersburg city exhibit and the various exhibits of the State institutions.

"Tuberculosis in the Cities" is the topic for Friday night's meeting, and several papers are to be read, followed by general discussion. "Open Air Treatment of Tuberculosis" will be considered on Saturday morning, while the topic for Saturday night will be "Tuberculosis Education."
